NCN Joins National Center for Policy Analysis

Irving, TX — NCN has partnered with the National Center for Policy Analysis (NCPA).

As a national leader in cost management, NCN is meeting the challenge of reducing healthcare costs by taking the mystery out of healthcare pricing. NCN sheds light on the real cost of care and determines rational, transparent payment for medical services.

NCN is proud to support the NCPA, a proponent of free market ideas about health care reform, health insurance, health savings accounts (HSAs), and other health policy interests, to cure what ails healthcare today — expensive charges, excessive claims, secretive pricing — and bring to all Americans an efficient, effective healthcare system.

“With healthcare spending at 18 percent of GDP and rising at an alarming rate, the system needs a rational voice and a transparent approach to pricing,” says Tom Galas, CEO of NCN. “NCN’s methodology provides a way to scientifically rationalize medical reimbursements and decrease skyrocketing costs.”

“NCPA believes in transparency and rational payment solutions for healthcare,” said NCPA President and CEO John C. Goodman. “All parties – payers, providers and patients – can benefit from a scientific, transparent approach to healthcare pricing. A rational payment system is critical to the sustainability of our healthcare system.”
